

ARE YOU MANAGING CHANGE OR IS CHANGE MANAGING YOU?

Goal:

Improve participants' ability to implement and manage change.

Overview:

The one consistent characteristic of today's environment is that of change.

When change manages us we experience powerlessness, anxiety, and a lack of motivation. We have a tendency to ruminate, blame others for how we feel, and allow the change to affect our relationships and our health.

When we are managing change we feel energized, focused, and productive. We are able to clearly evaluate our choices and concentrate our attention on those things we have the most control over.

Objectives:

Participants will learn:

1. To interpret the dynamics of change.
2. How to evaluate the impact that change has on you and your colleagues.
3. A model for soliciting collaborative support for change.
4. Four strategies managing change.
5. How to manage by prevention and response versus reaction and crisis management.
